AN INDIAN ARSENAL.

Over Two Thousand Arrowheads Found
Buried Under a Stone.

Among the collections of Indian relics owned in this state probably the finest, with one exception, is owned by Herbert Southmayd, who lives on the Haddam Quarter road, in the town of Durham, says the Chester (Conn.) correspondent of the Hartford Courant. A large part of them were found by Mr. Southmayd himself, as he is a confirmed relic hunter and knows many of the caves and camping grounds used by the tribes of this state. White flint, black flint, rose quartz, red and yellow jasper, limestone and glass stone were the stones used in the manufacture of 3,000 arrowheads varying from the size of a thumb nail to those nearly as large as a hand. His axes include the fine-edged, highly-polished tool to the rough, unfinished specimens. He has 30 of these, one of which weighs seven pounds, while the smallest turns the scales at 16 ounces.

Of his 11 pestles the longest measures 14 1/2 inches in length. Gouges used by the Indians in working out the inside of logs which they had first charred, in making their canoes, number 20. There are ten, five specimens of adze and 12 chisels. Of his three pipes the one he values most highly is a short-stemmed, perfect-bowled, and was found a few miles from his home. It looks much like a common clay pipe of to-day, excepting the color, which is that of red clay. The breastplates are notched around the edges, a notch for each battle the wearer was engaged in. On one of them can be counted 65 notches, denoting either a chieftain or one much given to fighting.

There are three war club heads, and a dozen hide scrapers, used in cleaning the hides from which their clothing and tents were made. Among the most interesting specimens to the ordinary man and which cause a peculiar sensation as their use is explained are the three scalping knives. A string of wampum was taken from a skeleton found in Portland. A red clay kettle is absolutely perfect. A bone ornament found in a cave is considered very valuable, as but few of them are in existence. The drills used for making the holes for the leather thongs in their moccasins and skin canoe show great skill and patience, as they are nothing but stones with which they tapered these from about the size of a pencil down to a sharp point. Of these he has 15. Brass arrowheads and a quiver divide honors with iron tomahawks. During a rainstorm a year or two ago Walter Lane sought shelter under a shelving rock at North Guilford, and while stirring the ground up to ascertain what depth has been made by the decay of leaves he was surprised to find an arrowhead. Renewed effort brought out 35 of them. Returning the next day with spade and sieve, he dug out 1,200 specimens, and from evidences found it was doubtless a spot where they were made and laid away against the time of need. Over 2,000 have been taken from that spot.

KIND QUEEN MARGHERITA.

An American Writes How She Has
Admired Herself to Her Italian People.

An American woman abroad says: "Queen Margherita is, in the parlance of her Alpine subjects, 'our kind queen,' with a strong emphasis on the adjective. She charms every one with whom she comes in contact. A little housemaid in the mountain hostelry of Casa Yanzo, where the queen stopped on two of her excursions from Gressoney, said: 'The queen patted my cheek. Just think how friendly is our kind queen! She is far more affable than even her lady in waiting.'"

"The 'kind queen' heard of a peasant girl who had met with an accident and broken her leg. Forthwith her majesty dispatched a messenger with inquiries and a present, and a promise of a carriage to convey the doctor and patient to the nearest hospital, which was a whole day's drive from where the accident happened. In one of her long walks Queen Margherita passed the charred remnants of the hamlet of Sant Antonio. She made instant inquiries as to the condition of the burned-out families, and the result was that each family received a $20 note from the queen—a veritable fortune in a poor valley, and, being wholly unexpected, a most welcome fortune, too. To a foreigner who had been helpful to some Italian peasants whose industry is as great as their poverty, the queen devised an enchanting surprise, making the stranger the channel of the royal bounty to a number of Piedmontese toilers. These are random but typical instances of the queen's tactful kindness."—Philadelphia Record.

HIS NATURE WANTED TO

Nature herself cried in the early spring, 'blessed be the trees and flowers, and the dependent crowd to which they are the delight of all, springtime and summer! You feel? Have you that tired shaky feeling, the fourness of Chills, Malaria and Typhoid fever? If so, you must not pass this warning as it is an indication of sickness; avoid this poison as you avoid a snake. You must get out your Dr. Caldwell's German Liver Powder. Take one dose a day at bed time for six days. Follow by procuring a bottle of Yucca and Chili Tonic, following the directions and after a week's course of these two great remedies, you will feel like the flowers look in the spring. Prepare yourself for the malaria or hot season with the atmosphere is full of germs, necessary and when your system weakens repeat the above. These Remedies in fact, sold by

THE WILY CHINEE.

Mongolians in the United States All from the South and "Good Boys."

"I would be willing to bet a house to a housefly," said an observant citizen, "that you can't discover a native of North China in this country at present with 40 search warrants. Ever since the eastern situation became serious, our Mongolian residents have been wearing out their larynxes in assuring the public that they come from the immediate neighborhood of Hong-Kong, on the extreme south coast, and wouldn't know a Boxer from a buzz saw. According to their statements the South China man, or Cantonese, and the North China man, or Manchurian, have nothing in common except pigtails and bias eyes. The Cantonese is a good boy, who goes to mission Sunday school, minds his teacher, loves the Melican man, dotes on tracts and never holds out collars in the week's wash. The Manchurian, on the contrary, is a tough citizen. He plays fan-tan, hits the pipe whenever he feels like it, eats rats, ties firecrackers to policemen's coatsails and likes missionaries—boiled. There are no Manchurians in the United States. Our Chinese colonies are composed exclusively of virtuous Cantonese. Moreover, the two tribes speak different languages. If a Manchurian were to say: 'Come, Hop Luns! let's stroll out and fry a few missionaries,' the chances are that Hop would think he was being invited to attend a church social and would go under an entire misapprehension as to the character of the entertainment. Consequently Hop would be innocent of wrong. I dare say all this is perfectly true, and the zeal with which the Chinese all over the country are pressing their disclaimers is certainly interesting. The bare mention of Peking makes their pigtailed stand on end. The other day a very meek, fat Chinaman called at my house for some washing. I wasn't sure he belonged to the right laundry, and I said: 'John, do you come from North?' I intended to say 'North Rampart street,' but he cut me short. 'No! no!' he shrieked, piteously, 'me no clum from North! Me South Chinese boy—all same good boy! Me no Bloxee—me Canton boy.' And he got incoherent and made a bolt for the door. I haven't seen him since."—N. O. Times-Democrat.

A PECULIAR FISH.

Accidentally Fell Into Its Native Element and Was Drowned.

Shooting and Fishing is responsible for the following story: There was once a man who believed habit governed everything, and so one day when he caught a fish he thought he would make an experiment to prove his theory. He put the fish in a tub of water and every day he would go there and put in a spadeful of dirt, making the fish less and less accustomed to its native element. Finally the tub was full of dirt, but by that time the fish was so accustomed to dirt that it was not only still alive, but very vigorous. By and by the fish had got so in the habit of being out of water that it spent its time flopping around the yard and about the house and slept in a box on the porch. It grew very fond of its master, and when he went out would follow him, flopping along the street and attracting everybody's attention. The fish followed him so much that the man began to get tired of it, and tied the fish up at the house to keep it from flopping along behind him. One day he started out from home, and he had gone a good ways, when he heard the fish flopping behind him. The distance was so great to his home that the man, rather than carry the fish back, let it flop on behind him. At last he came to a creek over which was a foot log, and the fish flopped upon it and started over. When it got midleways it flopped overboard and was drowned.

Counsel Fee.

"Before I agree to undertake your defense," said the eminent criminal lawyer who had been called in, "you will have to be perfectly frank with me and tell me the whole truth. Did you embezzle the $20,000 you are accused of having taken?"

"Yes, sir," replied the accused man. "I'll not attempt to conceal the fact from you. I stole every penny of it."

"How much of it have you left?"

"It's all gone but about ten pounds."

"Young man," said the eminent lawyer, putting on his gloves, "you'd better plead guilty and throw yourself on the mercy of the court."

"I'll do it if you say so, sir. What are you going to charge me for the advice?"

"Ten pounds."—The King.
